5 VALUATION DATE

The analysis of the fair value of Compulsory Convertible Preference Shares of the Company has been carried out as on 22nd December, 2023 for the purpose of issue of Compulsory Convertible Preference Shares in the Company.

6 BASES AND PREMISE OF VALUATION

We have followed IVS 104 for Bases and Premise of Valuation.

There are seven Bases of Valuation as under

1. Fair Value
2. Market Value
3. Market Rent
4. Equitable Value
5. Investment Value/Worth
6. Synergistic Value
7. Liquidation Value

We have considered base of fair Value for arriving fair value of Compulsory Convertible Preference Shares of the company since the company is going to operate business.

There are five Premises of Valuation as under

1. Going Concern
2. Highest and Best Use
3. Current Use/Existing Use
4. Orderly Liquidation
5. Forced Sale

We have considered Going Concern as premise for arriving fair valuation of Compulsory Convertible Preference Shares of the company since the company is going to operate business.

7 VALUATION APPROACH

There are three broad approaches used for business valuation:

1. Asset Approach

2. Market Approach
3. Income Approach

Asset Approach

The Asset approach methods seek to determine the business value based on the value of its assets. The aim is to determine the business value based on the fair market value of its assets less its liabilities. The asset approach is based on the economic principle of substitution which adopts the approach of cost to create another business similar to one under consideration that will produce the same economic benefits for its owners.

We have not considered this approach since the company is operating business and asset value doesn't reflect the fair value of Compulsory Convertible Preference Shares of the company.

Market Approach

The market approach relies on signs from the real market place to determine what a business is worth. The market approach based valuation methods establish the business value in comparison to similar businesses. The methods rely on the pricing multiples which determine a relationship between the business economic performance, such as its revenues or profits, and its potential selling price.

There is no peer group listed company in the market. Hence, it is not possible to derive valuation based on market approach.

Income Approach

The Income approach methods determine the value of a business based on its ability to generate desired economic benefit for the owners. The key objective of the income-based methods is to determine the business value as a function of the economic benefit. The income approach takes a look at the core reason for running a business - making money. The business value is sought to be established in the present, the expected income and risk must be translated to today. Discounted Free Cash Flow Method is a popular method to do this translation under income approach:

7.1 Approach for the Proposed Valuation

In our opinion, under the income approach, the discounted free cash flow method would entail a greater scrutiny of the future expected business and earnings and the risks towards achieving the expectations can be appropriately discounted or premium added based on the overall economic conditions prevailing, the industry / sectoral business environment and the liquidity of investment available to the investor.

After considering the limitations of the asset approach and the market approach in relation to deriving fair valuation of Compulsory Convertible Preference Shares of the company, in our opinion, the discounted free cash flow method (hereinafter referred to as the 'DCF Method') under income approach would be reasonably suited for valuing the shares of the company. Hence, this method is adopted for valuation purpose under this report.

8 VALUATION METHODOLOGY

We have derived value of Compulsory Convertible Preference Shares of the company by Discounted Cash Flow Method.

8.1 Discounted Free Cash Flow Method:

Discounted Cash Flow model indicates the fair market value of a business based on the value of cash flows that the business is expected to generate in future. This method involves the estimation of post-tax cash flows for the projected period, after taking into account the business's requirement of reinvestment in terms of capital expenditure and incremental working capital. These cash flows are then discounted at a discounting rate that reflects the risks of the business and the capital structure of the entity. The objective is to find the value of an asset, given its cash flow, growth, and risk characteristics i.e. to estimate the intrinsic value of an asset based on its capacity to generate cash flows in the future.

The DCF method values the business by discounting its free cash flow for the explicit forecast period and the perpetuity value thereafter. The free cash flow represents the cash available for distribution to the owners of the business. The perpetuity value of the entity is calculated to fully capture the growth capacity of the company to infinity, after the explicit period. Valuation takes into consideration the past growth rate of the concern as well as the future projections for the explicit period, while determining the perpetuity growth rate. The free cash flow and perpetuity are discounted. Discount reflects the risk of the business and capital structure of the entity. The objective is to find the value of an asset, given its cash flow, growth, and risk characteristics i.e. to estimate the intrinsic value of an asset based on its capacity to generate cash flows in the future.
